

The idea for my design is that the light creates the illumination of a christmas cracker opening. On christmas day, when food is served, just before you eat. You pick someone to be at the other end and 'BANG'! Someone won and inside is the paper hat, the toy that was always traded and the jokes that dad collected and revised so he would have some jokes that weren't one that only he thought of.

If my design was chosen then, if it went up in the market square. One light would be in front of the other. So it looks like a christmas cracker opening. Each one could be on for just a few seconds.
